Coast officials look at recycling option

BY D.C. HARVILL

Hancock County soon may be a cleaner place, if comments from elected officials who attended a special meeting in Gulfport Thursday are any indication.

The meeting in Gulfport Library brought together officials from Hancock, Harrison and Jackson Counties in an attempt to facilitate the creation of a Coast-wide recycling program.

"This is something we definitely need to look at. With the landfill problems in Hancock County we need to look at some alternatives," Bay St. Louis Mayor Elect Edward A. Favre said.

In addition to Favre, Hancock County was represented at the meeting by Bay Councilman Charles Scianna and County Supervisor Lisa Cowand, plus several concerned citizens.

Recycling consultant Bob Kochitsky from Jackson presented the group with the pros and cons of recycling, citing various types of programs employed by communities around the country.

The group selected a four-member committee, including Cowand and Favre, to draft a grant proposal for submission to the Mississippi Department of Energy and Transportation to help set up a pilot program.

"Pieces of it have been going on for some time—with people recycling cans and newspapers—it's just a matter of expanding it community-wide, then county-wide and eventually Coast-wide."

"We can do a lot on a local level. I would like to push something on a local level immediately," Favre said.

"If we can generate additional funds from something that is going to be wasted and we're going to have to spend money to dispose of, anyway, then I think we should," he added.

"It's a must! We might not see the effects right now, but our children will," said Cowand, who already is working to establish a pilot recycling program at Diamondhead.

The meeting was sponsored by Partners for Global Justice, a Coast-based, charitable organization that currently operates recycling centers in Harrison County.

Wastewater plants can help Mississippi oyster industry

BY DENA BISNETTE

Gulf Coast wastewater treatment facilities, including the one at Waveland, are tied into the future of Mississippi's oyster industry.

That is what two Bureau of Marine Resources Representatives told Waveland Regional Wastewater Management District Administrator Ethel Schott when they visited the Waveland facility Wednesday.

Veda Powell, originally the first female enforcement agent hired by the bureau and now a seafood plant inspector, and Beverly Allen, a shellfish program specialist, both said they were favorably impressed by the Waveland facility.

They are currently touring similar plants on the Gulf Coast in an effort to find out more about the treatment methods being used and their effect on water quality and, eventually, on shellfish like oysters.

"The bureau only recently took over the responsibility for this particular function and we realize the need to work more closely with the wastewater plants on the coast," Powell said, explaining that at one time, water quality fell under a different agency's jurisdiction.

Oyster reefs are classified according to the water quality in the area and its effects on oysters. When water tests show unacceptable or high levels of fecal choliform and other bacteria present, reefs must be classified accordingly.

Some of the biggest reefs, such as Telegraph Reef and St. Stanislaus Reef, are in the Bay St. Louis area, making the matter a local concern, Allen stated.

Use of some reefs must be prohibited altogether due to poor water quality, while others are classified as restricted and may only be used for relaying, she added.

Relaying involves removing oysters from another area with a poor water quality and placing them on a reef in a better area. However, whether relaying is successful depends largely on how long it takes the moved oysters to process undesirable compounds out of their systems.

The wastewater plants are connected to this procress because they play a large part in water quality not only by treating sewage, but also by providing their services to areas previously dumping raw or inadequately treated sewage into bayous, rivers and ultimately, the Gulf of Mexico.

"We are working to try to drop the classification of a lot of prohibited areas in Bay St. Louis and are working on evaluating what we learn and writing a management plan," Allen explained during a tour of the Waveland plant.

Powell said they chose the Waveland plant to be one of the first they would visit because it was rated best in its size classification in the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's Atlanta District in 1985.

Since then, Schott said, the plant has not competed for a rating due to expansion, because construction started the following year and is still not complete.

The plant is not yet a decade old, but the expansion was made to accommodate the sewage from Bay St. Louis in addition to that from the city of Waveland.

In addition, the plant will eventually service part of the county. Construction in Hancock County Wastewater District No. 1 is underway and the collection system is expected to go on line in September, Schott said.

Construction will start soon on a second phase, she added.

The area where the new collection systems are being built is in parts of Beat Four and Beat Five and involves parts of four subdivisions which currently have no sewerage.

Schott said many of the people who live in the area have some sort of septic system, but overflows into the bayous and canals are common.

"We hope taking in the unsewered subdivisions will help clean up the waters," Allen commented.

Schott added that a dis-

NO SHRIMPING

The Mississippi Commission on Wildlife Conservation has closed all waters under territorial jurisdiction of the State of Mississippi to commercial and recreational trawling until further notice.

The closure is due to the influx of unusually large numbers of undersized shrimp into certain state waters.

County schools seek tax hike; decrease in request expected

BY D.C. HARVILL

The Hancock County School District is seeking a 10 percent increase in the system's tax rate. But, the district will request approximately $348,000 less from the county's ad valorem tax revenue, according to Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph.

The school tax increase will help offset incremental salary increases mandated by the state for non-certified staff members, mandated retirement benefits and a five percent cut in state school transportation funds.

Non-certified staff, including cafeteria workers and janitors, are paid by the district instead of the state. Approximately 150 such employees work for Hancock County Schools, according to Randolph.

"If we don't get the increase we're going to have problems finding funding for the salary increases, the benefits and to take up the slack in transportation," Randolph said.

No administrators will receive raises, Randolph added.

The state allows a school district to request an increase of up to seven percent above the previous year's percentage.

If the system's request goes over the seven percent cap, as it does by three percent in this case, the public may object by filing a petition with the Hancock County Board of Education before the fiscal 1989-90 budget is adopted at the board's meeting July 3.

The petition must contain the signatures of 20 percent of qualified voters or, if less, or 1,500 qualified voters.

The increase, Randolph stressed, will not be on a taxpayers total tax bill, but only on school taxes.

The $348,000 decrease in requested ad valorem revenue is a result of cuts in administrative personnel and an overcollection of funds for the previous year.

According to Randolph, because the school system's fiscal year begins on July 15, three months before the county's, estimates in property assessments must be reflected in the budget for that lag period.

An over-collection of $159,000 was made last year, but had to be placed in escrow and removed from the tax base.

"Even if we are granted the increase, with the decrease, the rate still be 2.3 mills less," Randolph said.

"We will be the only district on the Coast requesting a decrease," Randolph said. District Business Manager Sheryle Coaker declined comment on the statement.

The district's proposed 1989-90 budget totals $14,356,976. Of that figure, $8,552,275 is earmarked for operation of the system and $5,804,707 is the remaining construction cost of a new junior/senior high school.

The final budget must be adopted before July 1 and submitted to the the State Board of Education and County Board of Supervisors before July 15.

Woman charged in assault

Bay St. Louis authorities have arrested a woman charged with assaulting a summer school principal who refused her entry to Bay Junior High School.

Officer David Sellier said Calister Rosemond, 20, of 402 Sycamore Street was charged with simple assault and arrested on a warrant issued by City Judge George Lipscomb Friday afternoon.

Rosemond is accused of hitting Dr. Betty Jones, summer school principal at the junior high, after Jones turned her away during a free lunch program, Sellier said.

According to the officer, Rosemond had "apparently been there before and caused trouble with one of the kids. Dr. Jones tried to stop her from going in, and when she ignored her, touched her on the arm."

Sellier said Jones had touched the woman to stop her from entering the cafeteria, but Rosemond "hit Jones in the eye with her fist." Jones did not require medical treatment, he added.

The incident occurred at about 12:45 p.m..

An initial appearance before Judge Lipscomb is scheduled for July 5. On Friday afternoon, Rosemond was in the Hancock County Jail with bond set at $500, Sellier said.

Cocaine seized in Pearlington

A search warrant executed at a Pearlington home Thursday at 7:32 p.m. yielded three bags of cocaine, a .38 caliber pistol, a scale and drug paraphenelia used to produce crack.

According to Hancock County Sheriff's Department Investigator Glen Strong, 20-year-old female Trenay Forrest of Pearlington was arrested and released on $2000 bond.

Deputies assisting in the search were Matt Karl, Bill Pepperman, Greg Lichtenstein and Sam Necaise and Constable Gary Bennett. The warrant was issued by Judge Lee Klein.

Officer Assaulted

A Bay St. Louis man charged with assaulting a police officer has been jailed on $1,500 bond.

Officer David Sellier said he arrested Aloysius Dahl, who has no known address, on Friday.

Sellier responded to a complaint from Merchants Bank that Dahl was sitting in the lobby of the Beach Boulvard location and was refusing all requests to leave. When the officer arrived at the bank, he found that Dahl had already left the building on his own.

Spotting Dahl walking down the street a short distance from the bank, Sellier stopped to speak with him and said the man "suddenly began using vulgar language, then he took a swing at me."

Assault on an officer is a felony and bond was set at $15,000. Dahl remained in the Hancock County Jail on Friday afternoon, Sellier said.

Mississippi Power ready for hurricane season

Summertime is a season of relaxation for most people. But, because it's also the season for hurricanes, Mississippi Power Company is anything but complacent.

Even though Mother Nature has been kind to south Mississippi in the last couple of years, MPC officials remember all too well the destruction hurricanes have unleashed in the past. In the last 20 years hurricanes have caused more than $26 million in damages to MPC's lines, poles and substations and left thousands of customers in the dark for days.

That's why the Gulfport-based utility prepares itself for the worst and puts employees into a state of readiness this time each year.

"The company respects hurricane season enough to maintain a detailed disaster plan," George East, MPC's manger of System Operations said. "The basis is to be prepared with equipment and manpower to restore electricity as soon as possible after a hurricane."

Since 1969 three major storms—Camille, Frederic and Elena—have scored direct hits on MPC's service territory. And, a number of smaller storms like Juan and Beryl have brushed by as well

In 1985, Hurricane Elena left more than 82,000 of MPC's customers without power. The utility put into action the comprehensive disaster plan which enabled it to restore service in just six and one-half days.

The storm procedures include safety precautions and detailed instructions for personnel to follow before, during and after the storm MPC also checks its stock and condition of equipment, tools and vital power restoration equipment such as two way radios.

The utility has a storm center in the Hancock Bank Building in Gulfport where essential personnel gather in the event of a hurricane to direct restoration efforts.

After a storm many employees take on work assignments quite different from their usual jobs. Managers answer telephones, accountants feed line crews and secretaries help inventory incoming supplies. Everyone pitches in to do whatever it takes to get the job done.

"Our hurricane preparedness plan is like an insurance plan. In the event of an emergency, we rely upon it to get back in the business of providing electricity," East said. "Every hour a customer is without electricity, we're losing business. So we want the power restored as much as the customer."

Arrangements have been made with other utilities to send crews and equipment to help MPC if there is heavy storm damage to electrical facilities.

As an operating company of The Southern Company, Mississippi Power Company would first call on its sister utilities—Alabama Power Georgia Power, Gulf Power and Savannah Electric and Power—for additional crews. If these were unavailable, MPC could get help from other neighboring utilities under mutual assistance contracts. After Hurricane Elena in 1985, MPC brought in more than 1,000 extra workers from nearby utilities.

"Unfortunately, Mississippi Power Company probably has more experience in hurricane restoration that most other utilities. And we hope that experience pays off the next time a hurricane blows into our area," East said.

"Hurricanes are part of our climate—we can't do anything about that. But we can be ready to pick up the pieces and restore electricity as quickly and safely as possible after the next one," East concluded.

Flag burning rule needs to be nixed

It appears the Supreme Court, in issuing a 5-4 decision Wednesday, has the majority of true Americans burning.

Those who have given their lives for the protection of America and the American Flag must be turning in their graves.

Hancock Countians, as well as others from every county in this nation, are not here today because they died fighting for the American Flag and the freedoms it symbolizes.

Congressional members need to pass constitutional amendments 'post haste' to outlaw the desecration of the flag.

Some American political leaders have short memories, yet we are proud of President George Bush's stand on the controversial court ruling.

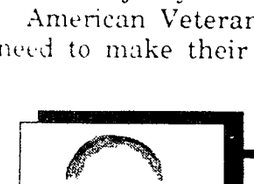

We hope the president will join with a majority of Congressional leaders to pass constitutional amendments aimed at banning flag burning.

Help will also be needed after a constitutional amendment passes the Senate and House by a two-thirds majority to have ratification from 38 states.

American Veterans organizations and citizens all need to make their voices heard.

OAKS SAVED—Southern Highway Commissioner Ronnie Shows, left, and Bay St. Louis Mayor Victor Franckiewicz view a stand of live oaks which will be saved with a redesign of plans for the expansion of Highway 603. The request was made by Franckiewicz and Waveland Mayor John Longo to the highway commissioner to save the trees which were scheduled to be destroyed for the four-laning of the dangerous highway. Both mayors, as well as we, are happy to see the trees will not be destroyed. (Echo staff photo by Ellis Cuevas)

"QUOTABLE QUOTES"

By Ellis C. Cuevas

The fitness trail in front of the Hancock Medical Center is fast becoming popular.

The lights were connected on Thursday and now one can walk at night and miss some of the heat.

While walking Thursday evening, I was talking to a lady who was exercising and she came up with an interesting fact. She said she and her two children who walk on the trail had been walking on the streets in the past but she was always left behind as the kids walked faster than she.

The fitness trail eliminates this problem as everyone can walk at their desired speed and not be too far apart.

I know there are many who use the facility which still needs some landscaping to be completed and I am looking for it to be one of the focal points of the area.

Some of the comments I have heard from those who haven't used the trail yet is that they have seen others exercising and realize they too should be walking.

Hope to see you out walking on the fitness trail soon.

Janet McQueen, Echo managing editor, will get a big thrill on Monday as she and her husband Kelly will be among several special guests of President George Bush at a reception in Washington.

Janet's husband is a former Bay St. Louis city clerk and finance officer for the Bay-Waveland School District and now has a CPA office in Picayune.

Kelly was also re-elected a few weeks ago to the Picayune City Council.

I am sure Kelly and Janet will enjoy the special visit with President Bush, as it is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity.

Next weekend will be a long one for many since July 4th will fall on a Tuesday.

There will be many activities over the long weekend and this will mean folks will have a lot of options for entertainment.

Among those are the Our Lady of the Gulf Crab Festival, St. Rose de Lima's annual Church Fair and the Mississippi Deep Sea Fishing Rodeo.

We know there will be other events too, and we will attempt to give you more details in Thursday's edition.

I would like to take this time to commend all of those who have completed another year of school.

I realize there are those who receive a lot of publicity while in school, yet all students should be commended.

It will not be too long before they will be the leaders of tomorrow and nothing can prepare them like a good education.

Education is playing a more important role in our society today as we near the 20th century.

One has only to look at the Civil Service summary of employees at the John C. Stennis Space Center to realize the importance of an education.

Some 23 percent have master/doctorate degrees; 37 percent, bachelor degrees; 25 percent, associate degree/some college; and only 15 percent have only a high school diploma.

A better deal for low wage earners

Republicans in the House of Representatives are determined not to let low wage earners be the big losers in the political power struggle between the president and House Democratic majority leaders over the minimum wage.

That's why a group of Republicans, including myself, have introduced the Living Wage Act of 1990, which we feel will be much more effective in getting help to the working people who need it most.

Under the Living Wage Act, low-income workers with families would receive more disposable income than they would get under the Democrat-sponsored minimum wage bill that President Bush vetoed earlier this month.

* Increase the earned income tax credit from the current base credit of $1,000 to $1,050 per year plus $700 per preschool child (0 to 5 years old) and $350 per school-age child (6 to 15 years old), and up to four children. The maximum credit for a family with four preschool children would be $3,850 per year, which is equivalent to an extra hourly wage of $2,08.

The earned income tax credit gives poor working families a break by allowing workers to take home more of their pay or to get a tax refund or cash payment at the end of the year. The credit phases out as income rises.

* Increase the minimum wage from $3.35 per hour to $4.25 over a three-year period.

* Permit employers to pay a newly hired employee $3.35 an hour to 80 percent of the minimum wage, whichever is greater, for a period not to exceed four months.

* Prevent employers from displacing any employee as a result of the new hire provision.

* Increase the tip credit from 40 percent to 50 percent.

* Increase the small business exemption for annual gross volume of sales from $362,500 to $500,000.

By expanding the earned income tax credit, the Living Wage Act would target low-income households, while the minimum wage primarily affects teen-agers, students and others who are often not among the most needy. This is backed up by the Bureau of Labor Standards, which reports the following statistics on minimum wage earners.

* 70 percent are single.

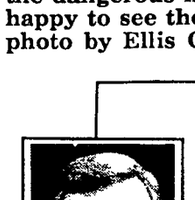

* 57.2 percent are younger than 25.

* About 65 percent work part-time.

* 15 percent are heads of households, and others in those households may also be wage earners.

Also, an increased earned income tax credit is better because by not increasing actual wages, it does not prompt employers to cut back on low-wage jobs.

For these reasons, the Living Wage Act is a more common sense plan for helping low wage earners than the Democrats' approach of simply raising the minimum wage. The Living Wage Act would put money in the pockets of the workers who need it most.

Mississippi rates first in many educational achievement

How about a pop quiz this week?

What state:

—Is the site for the new Space Shuttle rocket plant?

—The first state to commit to a computer lab in every elementary school?

—Led the country last year in teacher pay increases and the rate of higher education funding?

Recently passed bills to streamline state and county government?

OKed the first education reform act in the nation in 1982?

Is helping lead the county in adult literacy and child care initiatives?

The state that can lay claim to these accomplishments is Mississippi, as you've probably guessed by now.

When you step back and think about these and other achievements, it says something about Mississippians.

It says that our people want the best for their children, and we're willing to do the things that make a real difference in their future.

It says that Mississippians are innovative, and that we have something to show the rest of the country.

It says Mississippians are always looking for a better way of doing things.

We in Mississippi have learned that the students of today represent the economy of tomorrow. That is a lesson not lost on our nation as we face stiff foreign competition in the world.

We further understand that educational excellence must not stop with our children; that in today's fast-changing world, we must make sure those already in the work force can keep pace.

That is why we created the Governor's Office for Adult Literacy and hosted a national conference on literacy this year.

We understand the need for different, innovative approaches to problems. From putting a computer lab in every elementary school to hunting schools of fish using satellites, we know that technology and progress are linked.

Our future is looking brighter as a result.

There are 22,000 more jobs this year than last. And, companies announced a near record $2 billion in planned capital improvements last year. Mississippi led the nation in plant openings per capita last year.

We have a plan and a direction—and that direction is forward. Together, Mississippi can and will challenge the nation in the coming months and years.

WASHINGTON REPORT

By Senator Thad Cochran

Senator sponsoring legislation to enhance conservation

Senator Thad Cochran is sponsoring legislation to expand and enhance conservation programs authorized by the 1985 farm bill.

"We need to build upon and expand the effort initiated to help conserve our soil and water resources," Cochran commented.

"This new bill I am cosponsoring with Senator Richard Lugar (R-Ind.) seeks to more effectively protect groundwater quality, control wind and water erosion, improve wildlife habitat, and enhance our forest resources."

Cochran, a ranking member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said the 1985 legislation has proven effective in nearly eliminating erosion on 30 million acres of farm land, and it curbed the deterioration and destruction of the nation's valuable wetlands.

The new bill, the Conservation Enhancement and Improvement Act of 1989, has four main features:

1. requires the Secretary of Agriculture to offer three-year contracts on idled land for the

Neighbors are not the same now

Neighbors just aren't what they used to be.

There are always one or two you know well, but when I was a kid, people could tell you names of every head of family on the block, first names of their spouses unless the women were of the dignified elderly set in which first names aren't considered respectful, and names of every dog on the street.

The kids and the cats were a little more difficult.

While different breeds of dogs have different body types, the major differences in most cats are confined to coloring and hair length; it was hard to keep up with who owned what.

And, 20 years ago, people didn't have just one or two kids each, so children were harder for neighbors to remember as far as names were concerned.

Still, they knew who your daddy was and whether you were oldest, youngest or the first brother after the third middle sister, and they looked after you all equally.

Those who were what is now called latchkey kids usually had a next-door neighbor to call upon when a band-aid was needed or a question had to be answered. Neighbors became an extended family.

They never minded if you played in their yards if you asked permission and didn't trample the roses, and some had wonderful yards, like the elderly couple who lived next door to me when I was small. Mr. Price had a workshop that kept my brothers fascinated, and he was always cooking wonderful things. His wife had a beautiful garden and old toys of her daughter's to keep my sister and me busy.

Neighbors felt free to leave homes unlocked while they went to church because they knew those who were going later would keep their eyes on things.

Everybody knew when happy events had occurred and shared in the celebrations, and offered help or condolences to those who had suffered misfortunes. Everybody gossipped, too, but not in a malicious way.

Things aren't like that anymore. If you live in an apartment, you might know the folks in your building, or maybe the next one over, if you're lucky. In a neighborhood with houses, you know the ones on both sides of you and directly across the street, but almost nobody else.

If your phone goes out or you're short a cup of flour, you feel self-conscious about asking for help, unlike your mother would have felt at the same age; she would have probably sent one of the kids to ask.

Children are basically restricted now to their own yards or those of other families with children, although some still play in the streets of quieter neighborhoods. They are, in many cases, almost resented by childless neighbors who don't look forward to their happy noises at the end of a school day or in sunny weather.

Pets must be confined because even the smallest residential areas have seen an increase in traffic, and there are leash laws to protect them from the cars. Those who roam have short lives; they no longer find plates of table scraps at the back doors of neighbor's homes.

The gossip is malicious. In every neighborhood I have inhabited during the past decade, there has always been some sort of feud, however minor. The dignified ones conduct it in icy silence, while others feed it with malicious gossip.

The worst part is that neighbors, even if they are close enough to hear the sounds from each other's houses if they leave windows open, no longer get involved. Houses stay shut up for air conditioning or central heating and everything is locked; when something happens nearby, the inhabitants can't even hear it.

People find out about neighborhood events from someone at the hairdresser or the grocery store, often weeks after these things happen.

Minding your own business may be the proper thing to do, but how far should it go. There's been a lot of friendliness lost in the name of minding your own business.

Moersdorf promoted

The Navy recently announced the selection of Dr. Paul F. Moersdorf as deputy assistant chief of staff for program integration on the staff of the Commander, Naval Oceanography Command, located at the Stennis Space Center. Moersdorf previously served as director for the command's Space Oceanography Division.

Moersdorf is an authority in the fields of physical oceanography and meteorology as applied to acoustics and electromagnetic environmental effects and satellite data acquisition and processing for ocean, atmosphere and tactical forecasting.

Before joining the Commander, Naval Oceanography Command staff in 1984, he was employed at the Naval Oceanographic Office, also located at the Stennis Space Center. His principal assignment there was as chief scientist for the Tactical Environmental Support System (TESS) and Integrated Carrier ASW Prediction System (ICAPS) programs. From 1976 to 1978, he served as assistant professor, Math and Computing Sciences Department, at Old Dominion University in Norfolk, Va.

3. offers a voluntary, confidential well water testing program so that rural residents would know the contents of their drinking water. This program would be organized in USDA's Cooperative Extension Service, and;

4. provides added incentives for tree-planting, by giving the producers the option of 15-year contracts as well as 10-year contracts, to encourage hardwood planting in addition to softwood trees.

"This bill is a comprehensive effort to provide our farmers with strong incentives to conserve our land, water and forest resources as they continue to produce needed amounts of food and fiber," he said.

Reflections On Life

Christianity has no losers

Abraham Lincoln is frequently portrayed as a man who ...dded through a succession of ...re's History has plastered ... with ten distinct failures. He ... defeated for the U.S. ... in 1854. He was ...ted for the vice-...ntial nomination in ... He was defeated for the ... in 1858. ...uld be built that this ... an overall failure, ...gh he became Presi... U.S., because, ulti... was destroyed by an assassin's bullet. However, there is One who comes to his rescue to prove, through a number of personal parallels, that he was not a failure.

Abe was born in a humble, austere log cabin. Jesus did not have even that distinction, having been relegated to the animal atmosphere of a common cattle cave. At least, Abe could call that log cabin home and could lay claim to a dignified birth.

While Abe lost is job as a young man, many people considered Jesus a malingerer, a man without a real job, a jackleg preacher who leached the people and misled them by his teachings. And some of these cynics were from the hometown of Jesus.

Failure in business is one thing, but business is not the core of one's life. Abe was able to pick up and try his hand at some other business. Jesus, on the other hand, was considered a failure by many in more than a business: in the very core of what he taught as the reason of his birth, as his sole mission in life. According to them, his life itself had gone bust.

Lincoln suffered his losses in fair human competition, while the people around Jesus constantly accused him of superhuman, unfair competition; in short, of blasphemy for equating himself, a man, to the almighty Father in heaven.

After all these claims, Jesus had much more to lose than Abe. When an assassin's bullet ended Abe's sojourn on earth, it was recognized as the act of one wild, deranged man.

However, Jesus was brought down by the cream of the crop: the Pharisees, the elders, the leaders of the people. These saw to it that his death was not quick and neat, but slow, painful and totally disgraceful. With all that, he had to be buried in a borrowed grave, even as he had been born in a borrowed cave.

Most people consider Abraham Lincoln a successful human being and a successful president, even in human terms. Jesus, however, must be rated a bummer, a failure, in sheer human terms, for his presidency was not at all of this world.

Notwithstanding, Jesus, the disgraced, the beaten the ridiculed, the rejected and the murdered, was the most resounding success story of all time. Who else was dead, initially decomposing and locked into the cold darkness of the tomb, yet burst forth with power exceeding billions of megatons of explosives?

Who alone can promise unflinchingly even the most wretched human being that he will raise a wasted, rotted body to glory and to life unending?

We have the hot line from Jesus: To fail is not to lose, unless we fail to find God. Christianity has no losers, because all who begin as losers end as winners with Jesus himself.

SHOPPING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire Caire

A vegetable lover's dream come true are the produce bins and counters at our area supermarkets these days with their riot of colors and flavors.

And, we all know how good vegetables are for you, along with the varied fruits as well! You might want to stop by Winn-Dixie and pick up some of the cheese on special through this month of June, "Dairy Month," along with the fresh green broccoli on sale at Winn-Dixie also, and cook up a "Three Cheese and Broccoli Pie," which was the $1,000 prize winner in the recent Quaker Corn Meal Contemporary Classics recipe contest, in the main dish and stuffings category. Jill M. Barrs of Palm Harbor, Fla., created the recipe for:

THREE CHEESE AND BROCCOLI PIE

1/2 cup enriched corn meal
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
2 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. salt (optional)
1/2 cup milk
1 egg, slightly beaten
1/4 cup finely chopped onion
4 eggs, slightly beaten
10 oz. broccoli, cooked, drained and chopped. (The winning recipe used frozen broccoli, I prefer fresh.)
1/2 cup cottage cheese
4 oz. shredded cheddar cheese
4 oz. shredded Monterey Jack cheese

Heat the oven to 350 degrees. Grease a 9-inch pie plate. Combine corn meal, flour, baking powder and salt. Add combined milk, one egg and onion, and mix well. Pour into prepared pie plate, spreading evenly. Bake 10 minutes, set aside.

Combine the remaining eggs, broccoli and cheeses. Spoon evenly over corn meal base. Bake 45 to 50 minutes or until knife inserted in center comes out clean. Let stand five minutes before serving. (Six servings.)

* * *

And, you won't want to pass up those tender home grown eggplants offered at special savings at National and Jitney Jungle, and quickly stir up Thelma Yockey's streamlined, microwave version of that vegetable classic:

RATATOUILLE

1 medium or small eggplant
1 lg. onion
2 Tblsp. bacon grease
Chopped bell (green) pepper, celery and parsley, in quantity you wish
1/2 can Cajun Stewed Tomatoes (or 7 to 8 oz. stewed tomatoes)
1/2 can chopped black olives
3 pods garlic

Chop the eggplant, onion and other ingredients. Mix all together in microwave save casserole dish, seasoning with oregano, basil, salt, pepper and "anything else you have on the shelf." Cook on high in microwave for about 15 minutes, stirring occasionally. If it is runny, add some seasoned bread crumbs.

The eggplant gives this dish a delightful,meaty taste. Thelma often makes this up in larger batches and uses a portion as a "bed" or topping for poneless pork chops or chicken breasts or slices, etc. It's also a delicious hot or cold dip with toast squares or crackers.

Thelma gave me a dish of it the other day. I used some, chilled, to stuff hard-boiled eggs, and some more as a stuffing for some of these delicious mushrooms on special at Delchamps.

* * *

If you take advantage of the specials on first cut blade chuck roasts at National just now, you can cook up a delicious pot roast, and cut down your kitchen time for a few days, with hash or beef strips salad or sandwiches or hot open face beef and gravy sandwiches and so on till the end of the roast.

* * *

And with so many of the "small fry" around the house and yard these summer vacation days, give them a super-easy lunch treat with hot dogs from the selection on sale, from regular size to Jumbos at Jitney Jungle. Give 'em:

WEENIE BOATS

Hot dogs as needed
Slices of cheddar or Jack cheese as needed
Sweet pickle relish, or India relish or whatever they like best and you have on hand.

Slice the hot dogs down the middle, and spread relish down the length, top with a slice of cheese, then run under the broiler just until cheese melts and browns a bit. Serve on buns or paper plates, and be ready in seconds.

* * *

And, for dessert. Just raid the melon and grape and pear counters—there's nothing better for the kids. Or, give in to that ice cream craving, and buy some on special at Winn-Dixie or Jitney Jungle. Serve as is, or with some of that delicious fresh fruit piled atop.

Chapter I's 'Summer Magic' extends children's school year

BY DENA BISNETTE

Through July 11, a group of Chapter I students are participating in a special program at Bay Junior High "by invitation only."

According to Program Supervisor Debbie Cox, only students who were in Chapter I during the school year were "invited" to the program, which is being called "Summer Magic" and it involves a number of special activities not usually included in Chapter I.

"It's really an extended school year, but we called it 'Summer Magic' because we wanted it to sound more interesting to the children."

"We have had parents calling to try to add their children to this program. We already have good participation and were very pleased with the parents' response," Cox stated.

Like the regular Chapter I program, "Summer Magic" provides extra help in reading, math and language arts. It is provided through federal funding.

The students do 20 minutes of reading and math practice on the computers each day in addition to various types of in-classroom instruction, Cox said.

Other activities are somewhat more diverse than during the regular school year because students do not have other classes, Cox said.

They move from the classroom to the computer room and back again during the day, but teachers basically have from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 a.m. to work with the children, who were "invited" to "Summer Magic" based on their need for academic assistance.

Cox said there is a practical side to the learning activities for the 80 participants, who include parochial school students as well as public school students from the Bay St. Louis-Waveland area. A group of third graders, for example, is practicing writing by keeping daily journals. In another classroom, fourth graders write poetry every Friday.

Sixth and seventh graders practicing math also get an exercise in practical living. They are assigned a job each day, such as washing a car or babysitting, and are given a pycheck for the work.

Using checkbooks their teacher made by copying her own, they deposit the money and spend some of it on the various items included in a shopping list she provides. They are also working with statements and balancing.

Instead of sticking with textbooks for reading, Cox said teachers found regular children's literature, such as E.B. White's "Charlotte's Web."

"The children enjoy it more and we hope it encourages out-of-school reading," she said.

In addition, the children's edition of "Sports Illustrated" is being used.

Children also receive extra individual attention because, in addition to a teacher, two aides are assigned to each room.

With teachers listed first, they include Ann Reiss, Barbara Davis and Lois Wilty, third grade; Mary Kay Deen, Mabel Monti and Norma Richardson, fourth grade; Angela Peterson, Bea Christmas and Debbie Baktis, fifth grade; and Nilene Quave, Maxine Jaquith and Eunice Serio, sixth and seventh grade.

This is the first year for the program so results have not been seen yet, Cox said. However, the Chapter I staff is planning to measure the children's progress to see how effective "Summer Magic" is.

After "Summer Magic" is over, preparations for the regular school year's Chapter I program will begin. For more information, call the junior high at 467-0444.

Listening to Nature

The waves make a splishing, splashing sound as they crash into the beach.
Water moving down the Mississippi River.
The wind blowing makes the trees talk.
Gentle rain tapping, rolling, dribbling down the tin roof.
Birds on wing rustling through the trees...
Leaves on the ground
Owl's call echoing through the trees.
and the earth awakening!

(Photo by Marengo Photography)

Stinson-Esteve

St. Clare Catholic Church in Waveland was the setting for the June 10 marriage of Kathyleen Marie Esteve and Timothy Patrick Stinson.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Esteve Sr. of Waveland. The groom's parents are Phyllis Stanley and Louie Stinson.

The Rev. Noel Fannon officiated at the double ring afternoon ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza embellished with a lace insert on the fitted bodice and puffed sleeves. A headpiece of tiny organza flowers and pearls held a veil of silk illusion. She carried a colonial style bouquet of white silk roses and tiny red rosebuds interspersed with baby's breath, pearls and ribbons.

Melissa Hardie of Waveland and Angela Thames of Alabama, cousin of the bride, were matron and maid of honor, respectively.

Kathy Thames of Alabama, cousin of the bride, was bridesmaid. Flower girl was Sky Thomas of Waveland.

The attendants were attired in identical red gowns with black accessories and wore hair ornaments of baby's breath. They carried nosegays of red and white blossoms.

Andrew Esteve Jr. and Brad Esteve of Waveland, brothers of the bride, were groomsmen.

Ushers were John Grinner, cousin of the bride, and Bob Eisenger, both of New Orleans.

Annuities provide income to assist retirees

An annuity is a contract written by an insurance company to provide you with a regular income through periodic payments. Generally, you receive the income monthly with payments arranged to continue for as long as you live.

An annuity contract is classified as either an immediate annuity or a deferred annuity, depending on when the payment of the annuity's benefits is scheduled to begin.

Immediate annuities are generally purchased by people of retirement age and provide income payments at once. They are usually purchased with a lump sum payment.

Deferred annuities are plans under which you arrange to have income payments start at some future date. Interest builds up on the money you pay.

If you die before your annuity payments begin, the amount accumulated under the contract will be paid to the beneficiary you have designated.

The cost of an annuity depends on how much monthly income you want to receive. Annuities, like life insurance policies, are purchased with premium payments.

The amount of the benefit that can be purchased for a specified premium amount depends upon the length of time guaranteed to receive the payment, the interest the company can earn on the premium money invested and the expenses the insurer will incur in administering the annuity.

Bourgeois-Stieffel-Ray American Legion Post 77

The Post 77 charter was received on Jan. 22, 1970 and included the names of 78 members. The post name, Bourgeois-Stieffel-Ray, was derived from those of Elwood Bourgeois, a casualty of World War II, and James Stieffel and Dennis Ray, both of whom died in Vietnam.

The present post home on Coleman Avenue was dedicated on Memorial Day, May 28, 1974 with congressman, now Senator Trent Lott as the principal speaker.

The pledge of the American Legion is service to veterans, especially the disabled, the distressed and their widows, orphans and other dependents. Its cause is service to the community, state and nation. Children and youth programs are high on the post's list of priorities.

Since 1981, Post 77 has donated $86,000 to college scholarships for high school graduates from Hancock County. $82,000 of that total was given to students at Pearl River Community College which has a plaque located to Post 77 mounted in the lobby of the administration building to show their appreciation.

Post 77 participates in the American Legion School Awards program by annually recognizing outstanding graduates of the local schools through the presentation of certificates and medals.

Bay Scout Troop 77 is a vital part of the programs at the post, and in the past two years six members of the troop have earned the honor of being promoted to Eagle Scout. The post is happy to donate the facilities for scout meetings and the necessary funds for operating expenses, camps and trips, and to provide the leadership of a scoutmaster and assistants.

Another yearly program to which the post is heavily committed is Boys State, through which male juniors in high school are sent to the statewide event for one week to learn how local and state governments are organized and operate by participating in a model state which its governing bodies and elected officials. Post 77 is currently sponsoring eight boys to Boys' State in Jackson.

The American Legion Oratorical Contest is also an annual event in which the post participates. In that contest, high school students address an audience to inform them about the substance and meaning of some part of the U.S. Constitution. The winner at Post 77 receives a $100 U.S. Savings Bond and a trophy and advances to the district contest with the possibility of going on to higher levels to win scholarships and cash awards.

Five years ago, the Post 77 representative won the state oratorical championship.

Post 77 has a Little League Baseball team made up of 11- and 12-year-olds and also sponsors a team in the Youth Soccer League. Squadron 77 of the Sons of the American Legion is sponsored by Post 77. That group consists of all ages of sons and grandsons of American Legion members.

For Easter and Halloween, there are special activities at the post home for the children of the area, and they are given treats associated with those holidays.

Three times yearly, the post provides facilities, volunteer workers and refreshments for the Red Cross to conduct blood drawings at the post home with members and the public urged to give blood.

Post 77 has an annual citizen award banquet and dance at which a resident of Hancock County is recognized as the citizen of the year. Awards are also presented to public employees, members of the post and other individuals for outstanding service to the community.

Special services, with guest speakers, are held at the post home on Memorial Day and Veterans Day with refreshments served to all who attend. The Veterans Day activities also includes a parade.

Monthly trips on the post bus are given to patients at the Gulfport VA Hospital. They are treated to visits to Audubon Zoo in New Orleans, to the Mobile Greyhound Track and to other points of interest along the Gulf Coast.

Food baskets are donated to needy families at Thanksgiving and both food and toys are distributed at Christmas.

Post 77 provides meeting facilities for the American Association of Retired Persons, Senior Citizens of Waveland, the National Rifle Association, the Retired Senior Volunteer Awards Banquet and other groups.

The donations of funds to charitable and civic organizations are far too numerous to list here but are several thousands of dollars annually.

The post is always active in keeping the members and other veterans updated on their veterans benefits.

Unfortunately, there are those tragic times when the post is called upon to help a deceased veteran's family in their time of grief. These survivors are assisted with funeral and burial arrangements and with procuring a grave plot and marker if necessary.

Also, Robert McClure, service officer; Elie "Buddy" Williams, historian; Herbert Jeffery, chaplain; Paul Foret, acting sergeant-at-arms; Hebert Lytell and Wesley Dorn, color bearers; Luca Francabandera, Raymond Norton, Lin Rutherford and Kenneth Wilkinson, executive committeemen.

Medical Assistants

Coast Counties Medical Assistants will meet at the Biloxi Blues American Cafe on Thursday, July 13 at 6:30 p.m. Guest speaker will be Dr. William R. Clement of Gulfport, whose topic will be Retin-A.

Further information about Medical Assistants and/or details concerning this meeting may be obtained by calling Peggy Layman, CMA at 832-8220 or Judi Baumgartner at 864-0092 by July 7.

REALTORS RECOGNIZED—Bobbye Boyd and Nell Frisbie of Coldwell-Banker Real Estate were recently named Lifetime Million Dollar Roundtable award winners at a Gulf Coast Board of Realtors meeting at the Royal D'Iberville. The award is given to agents with sales topping $1 million for five consecutive years. Frisbie has won the award for five years and Boyd for four years.

Additional dollar for birth certificate will fund child abuse prevention program

A fund for the prevention of child abuse set up by the 1989 legislature adds one dollar to the cost of a Mississippi birth certificate. The State Department of Health must enforce this act beginning July 1.

The abstract (short-form) birth certificates, which now cost $5, will increase to $6.

Long-forms will rise from $10 to $11, and additional copies ordered at the same time will be $2 instead of $1.

The Children's Trust Fund Act serves as a mechanism for funding child abuse and neglect prevention programs. Advocates for the fund say it helps protect the state's most important resource—children.

According to Bob Collins, Division of Public Health Statistics, MSDH, the new act will require extra work for vital records employees, with start-up costs equalling about $10,000.

"We must change and reprint our existing applications and fee schedules, collect the money, and update our computer programs to account for the money," Collins said.

"We'll also pay a large mailing fee for sending out all the new information to social security offices, hospitals, welfare department and health departments; in addition to this, we'll incur the cost of mail applications back to individuals who do not enclose the correct amount of money."

Monies collected from birth certificates and other vital records support the Division of Public Health Statistics. The division receives no state funds.

"We were very supportive of the concept behind the Children's Trust Fund," said Therese Hanna, director of policy and planning, MSDH.

"However, we did believe it was our responsibility to tell legislators of the impact on our operations if they did choose to finance the fund through the birth certificate process.

"We also wanted to point out ways the new law would have the least affect on the poor. The majority of requests for birth certificate copies come from low-income people applying for public assistance," Hanna said.

The new law charges The Department of Welfare with the task of developing a plan for expenditure of the funds.

"The first year will be devoted to setting up a plan of action for the Children's Trust Fund," said Jane Hudson, director of protection, Department of Welfare.

How most people deal with the symptoms of a heart attack.

Hiding from a problem doesn't make it go away. In fact, hiding from the symptoms of a heart attack can make the problem worse. Much worse.

Be alert to heart attack symptoms. Chest pain and pressure are the most common. Pain may radiate down your arm, neck or shoulder. There's also shortness of breath. Cold sweat. Dizziness. Faintness and nausea.

Sometimes only a few symptoms occur. Sometimes more. Sometimes the symptoms can even be due to another problem.

Only one thing is certain. The sooner heart problems are treated, the better your chance of recovery.

That's why we're here. The Heart Emergency Service at NorthShore Regional Medical Center is the first of its kind in this area. Located in our Emergency Department, we save lives by detecting heart problems rapidly and providing necessary treatment.

If you experience any symptoms of a heart attack, get immediate medical attention. Anytime, day or night, you can call our emergency 24-Hour Heartline™ at 1-800-HEART-13. An emergency care professional is available around the clock to answer questions, give advice or even dispatch an ambulance if necessary.

24-Hr. Heartline 1-800-HEART-13

The Heart Center at NorthShore Regional Medical Center offers a complete range of cardiac care services. That's important to you during those first critical hours following a heart attack. And although you'll probably never need them, it's good to know our heart team is available 24 hours a day.

We employ powerful clot-dissolving drugs that can save lives by stopping and, in some instances, actually reversing the effects of heart attacks. The sooner these drugs are administered the better the chance of a complete recovery.

And advanced diagnostic capabilities, including our state-of-the-art cardiac catheterization laboratory, help us assess and treat heart problems more accurately and effectively than ever.

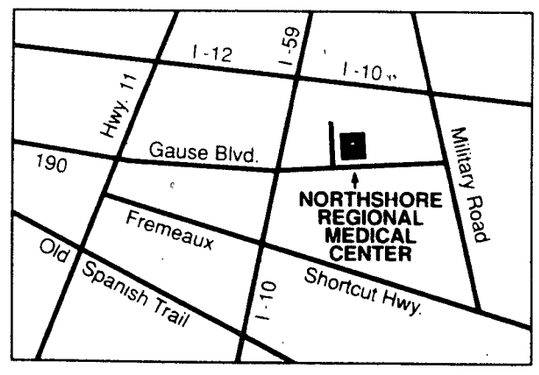

We also offer educational programs that help people prevent heart attacks, and rehabilitation services that help heart patients recover faster and more fully.

Learn more about The Heart Center at NorthShore Regional Medical Center by calling (504) 641-MDMD and we'll send you a free brochure that describes our cardiac services in greater detail.

Remember, don't hide from any symptoms of a heart attack. Go to the nearest hospital emergency department. If you're close to NorthShore Regional Medical Center, use the Heart Emergency Service in our Emergency Department located just east of Interstate 10 on 190—Exit 266—Gause Boulevard. Or call 1-800-HEART-13. Don't hide. Seek help.

All regulations set forth in ordinances of the Mississippi Department of Wildlife Conservation are to be in full force and effect and all boats engaged in catching or transporting shrimp in or from the waters of the State of Mississippi must be licensed by the Commission before beginning operations.
